There are two parts of hosting:

First part (The host stands up in front of the guests and welcome them):

Hello everyone! Welcome and thank you for coming to take a look at this wonderful business opportunity. I am extremely excited about. But before we get started I would like to invite you to watch a short overview video about the business. Also, if I may request you to please put your phone in silent or vibration mode and hold all questions till the end. So, let's watch the video.

Second part (After the video is over, the host comes up again):

Hello again and thanks for watching the video. Then you tell your "WHY". Why you want to do this business. Then talk about the presenter holds or how much money he/she makes. Your excitement and sense of respect for the presenter will make the guests pay more attention to the presentation).

For example:

I am excited about all of you for coming to learn about the business opportunity and I am even more excited about the gentlemen we have here with us. He used to do _____ but got started with this business a short period of time ago and within this time he became very successful financially by helping a lot of people make money. He is literally the Bill Gates in this industry and I can't believe he is here in my living room to help us. So without any further delay, please help me welcome Mr. _____.

Very important to remember:

You sit through the presentation, take notes and NEVER INTERRUPT the presenter. At the end of the presentation, turn up the music again and do the closing.
